

Regulatory Alert - Belarus

Assessment for compliance to human exposure requirements to come into force from 1st February 2017

Further to the PCS Regulatory Update of 31st October 2016 it has been confirmed that starting from 01st February 2017 the Belarusian Authority will be assessing compliance with EU human exposure requirements as part of their national Approval process.

This rule will apply to all radio transmitters irrespective of technology, and will be enforced for new products entering the market and old products currently Approved in Belarus.

At present it is unclear how the Authority will assess human exposure compliance and whether they will test locally for this, or use the data in existing EU test reports.

PCS will be following processes in Belarus very closely and will keep you updated once more information becomes available.
